Looking forward to the future

Friends and benefactors of Jewish Family & Community Services (JFCS) gathered at the Prime Osborn Convention Center April 26 to celebrate the mission of "Heroes Among Us: Looking Forward to the Future," co-chaired by Debra Pataky and Tammy Shumer.

Honorees included "the JFCS Faces of the Future," Faye Hedrick, Tmima Neihaus, Alicia Rauchwarger, Lauren Rickoff, Rachel Sandler and Lauren Setzer on the PJ Library Steering Committee, and Heroes staff Sersie Blue, Bernardo Cuadra, Jessica Grady, Tierra Holsey, Whitney Kuvin and LaTonya Waterman.

Hope, strength and generosity are hallmarks of the nonprofit which celebrated more than a century of community service assisting people in need with food and emergency shelter since 1917.

"At Jewish Family & Community Services, we are dedicated to helping people help themselves - no matter their religion, race or background. This event celebrates the incredible heroes among us who make our work possible in the community, from donors to staff members to the clients themselves. It is an honor to provide our services to the community, and we look forward to the next century of service here in Jacksonville," said Colleen Rodriguez, CEO.

Securing future of arts education more important than ever

As public school board leaders grapple with decreasing funds for arts education, the mission of the Cathedral Arts Project is needed more than ever. Now in its 25th year providing underserved children and youth with opportunities in the visual and performing arts, CAP's 14th annual Spring for the Arts gala will go far in helping address the shortfall in public arts education.

Spring for the Arts has generated $5 million through the years to fund quality arts education, thanks in large part to efforts by three-time event chair Beth Jennison, and to board members such as Marisa Martire, this year's honored Guardian of the Arts.

Martire has been a CAP board member since 2010 and, along with husband Frank, has chaired the Angels of the Arts campaign for three years. She is also involved with a variety of local Catholic charities and serves on the Mayo Clinic Leadership Board.

Marisa Martire, honoree, with Heather Moore, Cathedral Arts Project board chair

The benefit held April 27 at the River Club in the Wells Fargo Center drew many patrons from around Northeast Florida to join in the efforts to safeguard and advance the arts.
